The criteria focus is on measurable, demonstrable advancements in process innovation initiatives.

1. To what extent has design thinking influenced the process innovation, including user-centred design, creativity, and iterative development? How has data (e.g., real-time analytics, performance metrics, KPIs) been used to inform and drive the process innovation, and what results have been achieved?"
 2. To what extent has technology (e.g., automation, AI, IoT) been integrated into the process innovation, and what measurable improvements in efficiency or performance has this led to?
 3. How did cross-functional collaboration (e.g., between engineering, design, and operations teams) contribute to the success of the process innovation?" How have employees been involved in the development and implementation of the process innovation, and how has their input contributed to its success?"
 4. How were potential risks associated with the process innovation identified, and what steps were taken to mitigate them during development and implementation?
 5. What continuous improvement mechanisms have been incorporated into the process innovation to ensure its sustained effectiveness and refinement?
 6. What measurable impact has the process innovation had on customer satisfaction, market responsiveness, or competitiveness in the marketplace? What are the measurable business outcomes (e.g., cost savings, production throughput, safety improvements, profitability) directly resulting from the process innovation? How has the process innovation contributed to sustainability in terms of resource optimisation, waste reduction, energy efficiency, or sustainable materials usage?"
